An Explanation

While considerable effort has been made to record the tombstone inscriptions accurately, it is realized that errors may exist. If errors or omissions are noticed, please notify the Cemetery Committee.

Diagonal lines are used to separate the lines of writing on the tombstone, while three diagonal lines indicate that the information to follow is on another face of the stone.

To find specific stones in the Cemetery please refer to the map on the preceding page. The tombstone numbers were set up based on the following systems:

1. The letters W, E, N, and S which precede some numbers refer to the West, East, North, and South Ranges. The numbers which follow these letters refer to the plot numbers ( according to the Cemetery Board's plan ), which number from north to south in the West and East Ranges, and from east to west in the North and South Ranges. Letters which follow these numbers distinguish different stones on each plot.

2. The letter O at the beginning of a number means that the stone is in the Old Section. The second letter refers to the row. ( Row A is in the west line of trees. ) In each row the stones number from the north. Rows D and I are very short rows ; the map should be consulted when trying to locate stones in these rows.

For example : E-10b means East Range

10th plot from north end
second stone in plot

O-C7 means Old Section

3rd row from west line of trees
7th stone from the north end

The Index following P. 60 contains the names of all persons whose names appear on the stones. Married women are usually included twice ( if both their married and maiden names appear on the tombstone ) and may be found in the index under both their married and maiden names.

It is hoped that new information added to stones after the summer of 1979 can be compiled periodically in an addendum. Another supplementary section may include information gained from other sources which may clarify information on the tombstones.

INDEX

to the Old Section, West, East, North, and South Ranges of the Old Stone Church Cemetery

Please note the following :

1. Every name found on tombstones is listed in the index. In many cases, the names are of persons not interred there, but whose relatives are. The same names may appear on more than one tombstone.
2. Married women are listed twice if both maiden and married names were inscribed on the stone. Maiden names are shown in brackets, while married names are bracketed too, but preceded by " m. " .

E.g. For the inscription : " Jane Smith wife of John Brown... " there would be two references, (1) under Smith --Jane ( m. Brown )
(2) under Brown --Jane ( Smith )

3. Please look for other spellings of the name.
